VISIT CAMULOS

A National Historic Landmark situated within an 1,800 acre working ranch, and see the best remaining example of a Spanish-Mexican rancho in its original rural environment. Rancho Camulos is noted for its literary significance as one of the settings for Helen Hunt Jackson's novel Ramona.

Tours detail the lives of the native Tataviam Indians; the del Valle family who established Rancho Camulos in 1853; and the Rubel family, who purchased the ranch in 1924. Visitors can see the 1853 and 1920 adobes, cocina, winery, chapel, schoolhouse and the beautiful gardens featuring over fifty varieties of roses and the magnificent black walnut tree, covering one-half acre.

Additional features of the museum are a fish pond, built by the Rubel children as a school project in the 1930s, "Ramona's bedroom" popularized through thousands of postcards, and the newly restored fountain built in 1853.

Learn about the Ramona connection and view the silent movie Ramona starring Mary Pickford, filmed at Rancho Camulos in 1910.

Tours: Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays 1-4 p.m. & by appointment.
Suggested Donation: $5 adults; $3 for children 12 and under.
